

i think this is idiotic. just last month i bought a new hdtv and now i find out this may become reality. to change standards years after a tv has already been on store shelves is just plain wrong. people spend thousands of dollars on equipment to have the best viewing experience only to hear that there equipment might as well be useless. ur changing the standards because people are supposedly stealing money but with you changing the standards your stealing peoples money.